Movement Focus

Dominican Republic ▲

The Dominican Republic has been one of the fastest growing economies in Latin America since 2010 and its GDP per capita is among the highest in the Caribbean. On top of this, the economy benefits from diversified exports, declining public debt and strong social and governance indicators, all contributing to an improving country risk profile.

Mozambique ▲

Mozambique has been upgraded within the moderate-high risk category as an IMF programme and improving relations with external donors improves the outlook for its weak government finances. The expected restarting of LNG production should accelerate economic growth in the coming years.

Cameroon ▼

Political risks are rising in Cameroon as widespread popular discontent and entrenched political divisions and rivalries compound the risk of a disorderly power transition in 2025. Concerns about Cameroon's debt management capacity persist following several delayed payments under a now-resolved external commercial loan.
